Lincoln University has partnered with the Tourism Industry New Zealand Trust to support a fully funded three year PhD scholarship. The scholarship is to support research to provide a theoretically informed understanding of tourism's social license to operate in New Zealand. The practical outcomes of this research will inform monitoring and management frameworks for the tourism sector. The topic lends itself to graduates of the social sciences (sociology, psychology, anthropology, human geography) noting applications from other cognate disciplines, or interdisciplinary fields (e.g. tourism) will also receive consideration.

One scholarship will be offered to a student studying for, and new to, the Doctoral (PhD) qualification at Lincoln University in the Department of Tourism, Sport and Society. The value of the scholarship will be $25,500 emolument per year for each of three years, plus the amount equivalent to the New Zealand students' tuition fees (currently $7300) per annum for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Lincoln University for the same period. The tuition fee is paid annually by way of a credit to the scholar's fees account. Limited operational funds are also provided.

International travel costs are not provided.

Applicants may be New Zealand Citizens, Permanent Residents or International students. In the event of a tied decision preference will be given to a New Zealand Citizen / Resident

Conditions for the scholarship which closes the 31st January can be found at :
