

Students: Join the Global Planning and Urban Design Competition for Wuhan, China

Thursday, June 21, 2018

UN-Habitat is pleased to share with you the launch of the Wuhan Competition: a global planning and urban design competition for students with an urban renewal challenge in central Wuhan, China.

UN-Habitat in collaboration with the Wuhan Land Use and Spatial Planning Research Centre (WLSP) is looking for creative and innovative urban design ideas from students for a vacant waterfront site in inner-city Wuhan, China. The competition is part of the UN-Habitat – WLSP programme “People Orientated Urban Public Spaces” and covers the following key themes:

- Improving and innovating urban public spaces
- Revitalization of waterfront spaces
- Revalorizing industrial heritage
- Socially inclusive and compact inner-city centers
- Creating new tourism destinations

REGISTRATION is open until June 30, 2018. Join now!
