Research Fellow in Tourism and Events

The University of Sunderland is an international university with branch campuses in Sunderland, London and Hong Kong and with an extensive network of centres in other parts of the world including Singapore, Malaysia and Vietnam. The Faculty of Business, Law and Tourism has a track record of internationally excellent and world leading research and attracts a large number of post-graduate research students, seeing them through the successful completion of their research degree programmes. Within the Faculty, the Department of Tourism, Hospitality and Events is comprised of world leading researchers.

Research in the Department is led by the Centre for Research in Tourism Excellence (CERTE) which is underpinned by a critical, interdisciplinary approach that mirrors the dynamic nature of tourism, hospitality and events in contemporary societies. We are committed to ensuring that our teaching is led by our research, providing a transformative education for all our students.

Our Department has a very strong, positive work ethic, a focus on excellence and inclusivity, and offers a very welcoming and supportive environment for all new employees.

We now require a Research Fellow on a two year fixed term contract to undertake research into the Tall Ships Event, Sunderland 2018. To apply for the role you must have:

- A PhD or equivalent qualification in tourism, events or related area;
- A track record of publication in high quality tourism or related journals; and
- Skills in using both qualitative and quantitative methodologies
