View in browser

Versión en español

THE NEW SCHOOL Observatory on Latin America

The Observatory on Latin America invites you to

Politics and Judicial Power: Warnings from Brazil & Argentina

As climate impacts intensify, local governments are recognizing that social resilience and ecological resilience are deeply intertwined. This session explores how municipal care systems, ranging from community support networks and social safety nets to public health and caretaking services, function as critical, frontline climate infrastructure. By centering equity, gender justice, and local governance, speakers will share experiences in how investing in care work and community well-being strengthens urban adaptability, protects vulnerable populations during extreme climate events, and builds long-term institutional resilience from the ground up.

REGISTER HERE

Wednesday, November 11, 2026,

7:00PM to 8:30PM

Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Auditorium
room, N101 Sheila C. Johnson Design Center

66 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY

Presented by The Observatory on Latin America at The New School for Social Research.

Subscribe to the OLA

Observatory on Latin America
16th floor on 79 5th Avenue
New York, NY 10003
United States of America

https://observatorylatinamerica.org/

You received this email because you are in the OLA contacts list.